

Programme

STRUCTURE

This one-year programme is run in two sessions. The weekend lectures commence in September every year and end in October [a total of 8 weeks per session].

Students who pass all the taught causes and a term paper graduate with an MSc in Development Management in April, the following year.

What you get from the Programme

On completion of your course, you will understand and be able to analyse issues on:

- The discipline of project and programme management, within an overall appreciation of the nature and purpose of projects,
- The principles and practice of project planning, design, preparation, and appraisal techniques for projects in a development context.
- The theory and practice of management for project and programme management, focusing particularly on 'hard' and 'soft' skills for successful project implementation.
- The frameworks for conducting project and programme monitoring and evaluation
